THE LAND OF THE LOTUS BY THE MEXI-CAN GULF-A STATESMAN'S OPINIONS ON VARIOUS SUBJECTS.

[Correspondence of the Boston Herald.] NEW ORLEANS, May 10. - Seventy-five miles east of this city, on the New Orleans in bygone days. He has that rare cheerfuland Mobile railway, is the little flag-station | ness of humor which communicates itself of Beauvoir, about equi-distant from Missis- to his auditors, and has, besides, a quietly sippl City and Biloxi, favorite seaside re- witty turn. What was said by Mr. Davis sorts of the wealthy residents of New Orleans. Beauvoir is the home of Jefferson Davis. This alone gives it celebrity and preeminence among the quiet and delight- were tinged with bitterness. He seems to ful little towns along the Gulf shore. Intending a visit to the famous southern statesman, I took the early train of all opinions, while earnestly believing in yesterday morning for the shore. The the doctrine of State rights. Without the railway runs through a country of States there could, he said, be no Union, great interest to the northern eye. Leav- and in local self-government alone lies long stretches of swamp land (pantanosas understand it. the early Spaniards colled them), along quiet bayous, affording glimpses of the semitropical scenery of this region, past the curious lake dwellings of the negro fishermen and across miles of trestle-work over broad expanses of water. The road-bed is excellent, and is ballasted with white sand from the train glides along.

MR. DAVIS'S HOUSE. Alighting from the train at Beauvoir stavista of vanishing railway track, glittering with millions of minute refractions of the bright sunshine for miles along its sandy way. Taking the half-perceptible roadway to your right, ten or fifteen minutes' walk through the pines brings you to the beach. Here you see a house built in the airy fashion of this region of perpetual sunshine. This is the residence of Rev. Dr. Lacock, an aged Episcopalian clergyman, once chaplain to the Duke of Cambridge. Beyoud the reverend gentleman's estate you you pass across a lawn dotted with live-oak and other trees, festooned with the picturesque Spanish moss. Before you is a low and spacious mansion, painted white, with nearer the fence, is a small building-a sort of pavilion. While resting on the veranda, waiting for your letter of introduction to be handed to the master, your eye takes in the hospitable provisious for ease afforded by several comfortable rocking-chairs, a table, and a settee. Life here is al fresco. The broad ball which goes through the house is open to the breeze, but not to the ardent sun, whose rays are intercepted by the veranda. WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

Here, on the front veranda, sits of a full view is the Gulf of Mexico, that daz-Its summer waves glide softly to break in lulling sound upon the white and sparkling sand. The breeze is laden with the strange perfume of the sea. It is the land of the lotus-eaters, where 'tis always afternoon. Sitting on this veranda, into what reveries may not the Confederate ex-President fall as he gazes out upon this Mexican Gulf, which, had the dreams of the southern statesmen been realized, would have been the inland sea of a mighty empire stretching to the tropics.

I was soon summoned to the little pavilion to the right of the mansion. This building is divided into two parts. The rearward is occupied by an ancient and favorite negro servant, whose idea of housekeeping is to display his furniture and tools on his little veranda. He has a notion of raising vegetable odds and ends in boxes, and his vagaries excite but a smile. No of order, with the privileges of this ancient spoke of the sure remuneration afforded by servitor.

THE STATESMAN.

The front portion of the pavilion is occupied by Mr. Davis as a library and study. Here I found him, slightly indisposed and Ising upon a lounge. His manner is genial and very kindly, with that charming courtesy characteristic of the high-bred southern gentleman. Seventy years of age, Mr. Davis has yet a fresh and vigorous look. His hair, moustache, and whiskers are white in part, but his eye is bright and cheerful. His face, in repose, is almost severely intellectual, but the smile which lights up his mouth and his quietly cheerful laugh dispel the first impression of coldness. Few of our public men have the quiet fascination of manner, the old-fash-ioned grace, and the charming conversational powers of Jefferson Davis. His memory is capacious and retentive. One might, with a facile phonographic pen, collect great stories of reminiscence from his

I asked him if he was much visited by newspaper-men. He replied that he was not, for he had made it an invariable rule not to be interviewed; and of the repulses of reporters be gave me several instances of an amusing nature. "Surely," be said, "I. who am disfranchised, not even a citizen of the United States, and with no political ambitions, may claim immunity from the reporters." The conversation naturally turned upon

Papers are sent him from everywhere, many of his southern friends addressing their papers to "ex-President Davis." LITERARY HABITS.

I asked him if, in working on his memoirs, he preferred the morning hours for his literary task. He said that he did not; that he could work better evenings, and was, in fact, a late riser. "I got enough of early rising in the army in my younger days," he added. The manual labor of writing was, he remarked, distasteful to him, and he sought relief in dictation, although his thoughts come faster than the pen of his amanuensis could secure them. "The only person who could ever write fast enough for me," he said, "was my chief clerk when I was Secretary of War. He disliked composition, and I equally dis-liked writing. We were, therefore, the complements of each other."

Mr. Davis incidentally semarked, while glancing through the papers, that it was charged that the Southern Confederacy had been established to revive the slave trade. and, here referring to the Confederate Constitution, he read the clause prohibiting the

The consideration of that he did find himself greatly inconvenienced at times. Mr. Davis remarked that John Quincy Adams was probably the widestread of American statesmen. "If you could not find the book you wanted, Mr. Adams," said he, "could tell you of another which contained what you were looking for. Mr. Adams was what few people remember-a very witty man."

REMINISCENCES. Early in the afternoon lunch was served in the little library. While we ate Mr. Davis talked pleasantly of men and events regarding current politics I am not at lib-erty to repeat. But I may say that none of Mr. Davis's Judgments of men and things discuss politics from the serener beights of philosophic statesmanship. He is tolerant ing New Orleans, the road takes you past safety. This is the Herald's principle, as I

They had asked his opinion of Kansas, and he had told them of its rigorous climate, but had said to them, if they felt it to be for their best good to leave, to go rather to a warmer region.

As an instance of negro credulity, Mr. Davis related to me the experience of one of his negroes, to whom an agent had sold a certificate for $5, entitling the purchaser to take forty acres of waste land. The poor fellow selected a piece of ground and spent see, fronting the beach, another estate, the all his savings in improving and stocking residence of Mr. Davis. Entering the gate, the place. At either side, a trifle Davis thinks the return of some of the Kansas emigrants will for a time deter other negroes from trying their fortunes there, but he fears that the easy credulity of the negro may at any time render him the victim of some cruel scheme.

ENTERPRISE IN MISSISSIPPI. Men of small capital can invest it to advantage in fruit- and vegetable-culture. Vine-dressers will do well. The thirty-second parallel of latitude, said Mr. Davis, indicates the proper country for the peach. On both sides of this line the peach thrives. This parallel runs nearly through Vicksburg, Jackson, and Meridian. Mr. Davis There were instances of trees bearing 5,000 oranges, or at the rate of $50 a tree. "But to be moderate," he said, "let us say from 1,000 to 2,000 oranges per tree; here is from $10 to $20 return." Fig-culture is practicable on a large scale, and he would advise the canning of this fruit for the market. He had, he said, seen the blue Celeste fig candy on the trees.

MR. DAVIS'S HEALTH.

One word of the master of the estate at Beauvoir before I close. Mr. Davis, tory of journalism in this country. He posed, has good general health. He takes spoke of the great accuracy of the Murphy a "constitutional" on horseback daily, and brothers, the official stenographers of the is a good pedestrian. He told me that since speaker, he always felt that he was going to and come to the coast his health had unbe accurately reported when either of the proved. When he was in Congress he spent his winters in Washington and his summers sanitary rule, and malaria attacked his system. His sojourn in Canada benefited him greatly. He says that he cannot advise immigrants to go to the aliuvial region on the river. It is true, he said, that a Russian gentleman, near Natchez, has a plantation on which he employs Danes, but they work in an unusual manner to preserve their health. They rise early and work to the noon heats, rest, and resume work late in the afternoon.

Mr. Davis believes the negro alone to be permanently capable of out-door work in a hot climate. The negro thrives assid misses and in swamps. Mephitic guses that would kill a white man do not harm the negio. When the negio sleeps he pulls the bed-clothes over his bead, and all night breathes gases which would render a white man sick, if not ansensible.

I moticed the kindly manner in which Mr. Davis addressed his black servants. They show in their physique and dress the care of a kind and liberal master, and the people of the region tell methat he is much beloved and venerated by his servants.

It met the approval of those to whom the selection of an inscription for the monument was committed, and it looks a little ungracious to object at this late hour. However,

I shall be candid and brief : 1. The inscription is not, so far as I am informed, to be found in any classic author. You will find it, however, in "A Dictionary of Select and Popular Quotations, &c., by D. E. McDonnel, of the Middle Temple," who doubtless got it somewhere, and who translates it, "I stand to God and my

V SHALL STREET LOTS AT AUCTION.—On THURSDAY, 29th May, at 5 o'clock P. M., we will sell by auction, upon the premises, SIN BUILDING LOTS on the north side of Groad street, beginning Franklin street, the RESIDENCE of General Bradley T. Johnson.

This is the most desirable PROPERTY purchasable in the city. It fronts 132 feet on Franklin and 170 on Madison street, with a ten-foot alley belonging to it. The mension is 80 feet front. It contains a parior, drawing-room, library, and sining-room, all opening into a large hall in the centre, on the first floor. There are four chambers on the second floor and three on the third; large halls obtaining the house from bottom to top.

The basement contains kitchen, laundry, servants and servants' chembers. The stable accommon to Norton screet, but the Richmond Codege grounds, 32x157 feet log and alley.

AUCTION SALE OF BUILDING LOTS is the property of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Company.

Also, a VERY BEAUTIFUL LOTS to the Richmond Codege grounds, 32x157 feet log and set corner of Rroad and Bowest corner of Road and Bowest corner of R icksburg and Potomic Railroad Company.
Also, a VERY BEAUTIFUL LOT at the northerst corner of Broad and Bowe streets, and opposite to the Richmond Codege grounds, 32x157 feet to

And TEN LOTS on the south side of Marshall street, extending from Harrison to Norton screet, and immediately in rear of property recently purchased by the rathroad company.

The lots on Marshall street are each 32x143% feet to an aliey.

In no part of the city has there been so much improvement in the grades of the streets as in the vicinity of these loss, and the most of them be as beaufifully as could be desired. This, together with the location of the depots and the growth of business in that direction, gives to the property a prospect of value at no distant day that will well repay an investment made at the present depressed rates. A little money invested here much prove more profitable than in many of the securities so eagerly sought after at high prices.
